Teacher of the Month

Iggy - Brass Instructor

Inigo Hermann (“Iggy”) holds a Bachelor’s degree in Music Education from William Paterson University, where he studied classical trombone. He’s enjoyed playing brass instruments ever since learning the baritone in Germany as a young child.

Iggy has been teaching students of all ages since 2013. He prioritizes a well-rounded education; in addition to fundamentals, he also incorporates music theory and vital reading skills into his lessons. Iggy enjoys performing with a variety of community groups such as the Livingston Symphony Orchestra, the New Jersey Gamer Symphony Orchestra, and the Jacksonville Chapel Concert Band as well as pit orchestras for local music productions. Beyond sharing his musicianship in northern New Jersey, he has been an audio engineer and editor for media companies in New York City.

New Voice Teachers!

Robert Yun

Robert Yun, Baritone, has 25 years of experience as an international opera singer. His career has taken him to renowned opera companies worldwide including Metropolitan Opera and Carnegie Hall performances. His education started at Seoul National University, Boston University and Curtis Institute of Music.

Robert has taught numerous students for auditions to conservatories, state choir and competitions. His studio consists of students from age 7 to adults. His “bel canto” Italian style of singing will serve as foundation for great singing technique for all ages.

Kenna Heim

Kenna is a versatile vocalist and performer from Montville, NJ.

She earned her bachelor's degree in music education from Rutgers' Mason Gross School of the Arts in New Brunswick, NJ.

Classically trained, Kenna is skilled in a wide range of musical styles including rock, musical theater, opera, and jazz. She has performed at venues and events across New York, Connecticut, Washington, D.C., and beyond. Passionate about sharing the joy of music, Kenna is dedicated to helping her students build confidence and discover their unique voice.
